cen practice tests online: Child Exploitation and Online Protection Centre (CEOP) Great Britain. Home Office, 2010 In 2006 the Government recognised that the protection of children required a multi-organisational approach with local, national and international cross-sector co-operation in order to limit offender opportunities and protect the community, in particular children and young people. As a consequence, the Government created CEOP, strongly supported by the police, the internet industry and by the third sector, all of whom recognised the need for a coordinated and holistic approach to the issue of child protection in a digital age - including developing and implementing a 'one stop shop' for internet-related issues that had an impact on the safety and security of children and young people online. Since its inception, CEOP has rescued over 500 children, and has led to the arrest of over 800 people seeking to harm children. It has developed the leading UK child internet safety website ThinkUKnow, backed up by a comprehensive schools programme with award winning materials, and has achieved significant success through its 'Most Wanted' website, which targets missing sexual offenders who offend against children. CEOP has been affiliated with the Serious Organised Crime Agency (SOCA), but the Government now believe that the time is right to give CEOP a legal identity of its own as a Non-Departmental Public Body (NDPB). This document sets out the achievements of CEOP, the reasoning for the change in status, the existing remit and further areas of work in which CEOP should develop policies.
