the long walk digital copy: The Long Walk to Equality Avis Whyte, Patricia Tuitt, Judith Bourne, 2024-02-20 In 1965 the UK enacted the Race Relations Act while the International Convention on the Elimination of all Forms of Racial Discrimination (ICERD) opened for signature and ratification. In the US, the changes that brought down the walls of segregation, conveying some equality to black people essentially began with the Civil Rights Act of 1964. These ground-breaking instruments marked a commitment—domestically and internationally by the state parties to the ICERD—to address racial injustice and inequality through legal means. Yet, the intervening years reveal the challenges of pursuing racial justice and equality through the medium of law. In recent years, allegations of institutional racism have been levelled against numerous public institutions in the UK, while the rise of populism globally has challenged the ability of law to effect change. This edited collection draws attention to the need to reflect on the persistence of racial inequalities and injustices despite law's intervention and arguably because of its 'unconscious' role in their promotion. It does so from a multiplicity of perspectives ranging from the doctrinal, socio-legal, critical and theoretical, thereby generating different kinds of knowledge about race and law. By exploring contemporary issues in racial justice and equality, contributors examine the role of law—whether domestic or international, hard or soft—in advancing racial equality and justice and consider whether it can effect substantive change.

the long walk digital copy: The Long Walk Project at Hoghton Tower Cometan, 2019-05-31 This report is manifested as a marketing plan that encompasses the scope of The Long Walk project at Hoghton Tower by particularly focusing on whether The Long Walk would be able to fund itself through the addition of features to the experience in order to attract paying visitors. This marketing plan will cover all elements of different marketing theories by applying them to the particular context of The Long Walk in order to conclude as to whether there exists a realistic viability for The Long Walk to fund its own maintenance. The marketing plan will be illustrated by images of The Long Walk, displays of marketing theories such as perceptual maps and matrices, as well as charts constructed to support the points made. The marketing plan for The Long Walk has been constructed according to a three-pronged scheme of options each of which differs in scale and funding requirements. The first of such options focuses on a purely Conservation-oriented Approach with minimal investment and almost entirely focused on the conservation of the area rather than the addition of features to attract greater numbers of paying visitors. The second of the three options is a Medium Investment Approach by Hoghton Tower with certain relatively low cost additions made to The Long Walk in order to attract visitors while the third option is a High Investment Approach which involves the construction of outbuildings with much greater scale than the previous two options. The practicality of each option diminishes the higher the investment for the project becomes, but by demonstrating these three options, a practical framework is provided to show the potential of The Long Walk area across a spectrum of ideas from small scale to large.

the long walk digital copy: Story Katie Egan Cunningham, 2015 Stories surround us, support us, and sustain us. We see and hear them when walking down the street, on our digital newsfeeds, in our interactions with one another, in the ways our students play, and in literature, poetry, music, images, multimedia, and dramatic works. While acknowledging the importance of teaching students strategies to read different kinds of text, to write across genres, and to speak and listen with purpose, Katie Egan Cunningham reminds us that when we bridge strategy with the power of story, we deepen literacy learning and foster authentic engagement. Story: Still the Heart of Literacy Learning compels us to ask crucial questions: Why do stories matter? Whose stories count? Where do stories live? How do stories come alive? How do we build stories? How do we talk about stories? And why does this work take courage? Katie shares her story as a classroom teacher, literacy specialist, staff developer, and professor. She shows teachers how to create classrooms of caring and inquisitive readers, writers, and storytellers. Katie explains specific ways to build a classroom library that reflects our diverse society through rich, purposeful, and varied texts. She also provides numerous examples of multigenre and multimodal stories from children's and young adult literature, poetry, songs, and multimedia. The practical toolkit at the end of each chapter demonstrates how to make stories come alive in any classroom.
